New Education Website Is Environmentally Friendly / Paper Materials Printed Only As Needed

Tucson, Arizona – April 19, 2004-- Homeschoolers, classroom teachers, school districts and parents concerned with unused workbooks and excessive paper waste have a new alternative. TheLessonMachine.Com. According to company founder, Myscha Theriault, “One benefit of a subscription with The Lesson Machine is that the materials are electronically filed and stored for you. You print only what you need, when you need it.” Another benefit says Theriault, is increased space from the number of files that are no longer necessary to store and find valuable room for. Not to mention how much less money will need to be spent on filing supplies.

“The philosophy behind TheLessonMachine.Com is simple,” Theriault states. “We believe that corporate success and corporate responsibility can go hand in hand.” In addition to reducing unnecessary paper waste, the company uses the telecommuting employment model almost exclusively. “We believe it is environmentally responsible.”
